The increasingly ageing population is one of the world's great success stories. However, it also presents the world with one of its greatest challenges.

But with so much attention on this issue, what does ageing really mean? What role can and could nutrition potentially play in helping society meet the challenge. How are policy makers and their advisers responding at present and what can we learn from countries that are already engaged in these issues?

These questions and many more on this important area of public policy and science will be addressed in the IADSA Conference.

1. The science of healthy ageing: Perspectives on definitions
2. The impact of nutrition on aspects of healthy ageing
3. National policy responses to the challenge of ageing
4. Panel discussion
5. Conclusions
